This index is a subject guide to special and local laws enacted by the Legislature of the State of Florida. It is updated annually to incorporate references to laws passed during each legislative session. This volume covers laws enacted in the years from 1971 through 2013. Laws enacted prior to 1971 are covered in the companion volume, Index to Special and Local Laws, 1845—1970. Together, the two indexes provide comprehensive access to special legislation relating to local government in Florida.

This volume indexes all laws published in Volume II, Special Acts, of the Laws of Florida, including special laws and relief acts. In addition, this index also includes a number of entries concerning laws published in Volume I, General Acts, of the Laws of Florida. These are general laws of limited territorial application that have been omitted from the Florida Statutes because they are not of general application throughout the state. See s. 11.242(5)(c) and (k), Florida Statutes. Special and local laws that were subsequently repealed or superseded are included in this index as part of the historical record.

References in the index are to law chapter numbers assigned by the Secretary of State. These citations represent the year the law was enacted followed by a unique identifying number. References occasionally cite pre-1971 laws amended or repealed by subsequent legislation. Prior to 1957, chapter numbers did not include the year of enactment; however, this information has been included for indexing purposes.

This volume continues the format of the 1845—1970 index by classifying special and local laws according to the political subdivisions of the state: counties, municipalities, and special districts. Counties and municipalities are indexed under their individual names. A special district encompassing territory in more than one county is indexed under its own name and is cross-referenced under each affected county. A single-county district is indexed under the county in which it is located and is cross-referenced under its own name whenever the name of the county is not contained in the name of the district. A school board is indexed under the name of the county of its jurisdiction.

Additional entries cover special laws that may not have political subdivisions as their focus. Thus, special laws affecting institutions of higher learning are indexed under the headings “FLORIDA COLLEGE SYSTEM INSTITUTIONS” and “STATE UNIVERSITIES.” In contrast, laws affecting public schools, grades K-12, can be located by referring to the entries “School Board” or “Schools” under the appropriate county name.

Laws naming buildings, roads, and bridges are indexed under the headings “BUILDING DEDICATIONS AND DESIGNATIONS” and “ROAD AND BRIDGE DESIGNATIONS,” as well as under the appropriate political subdivisions.

Relief acts are indexed under the heading “RELIEF ACTS.” Entries contain the names of the individuals compensated followed by the names of the agencies or jurisdictions responsible for providing relief. If the relief act pertains to a local government, it is also indexed under the local government’s name.

A small number of special laws, not pertaining to the classifications discussed above, are indexed under “MISCELLANEOUS LAWS.”

Cross-references are employed to assist the user and to avoid excessive duplication of entries. An uppercase “See” reference directs the user to a heading where all references on a particular topic have been collected. An uppercase “See also” references directs the user to headings that contain related or collateral material. A reference in lowercase letters indicates the reference is to an entry within the same main heading. References followed by “[1845—1970]” are found in the 1845—1970 volume of the index.
Additionally, as an aid to finding related material, every main heading for a municipality or a multicounty special district is followed by the name, in parentheses, of the county or counties within which the municipality or district is located.

To locate the organization, powers, and territorial limits of a municipality as established by its charter, the user should search for the subheading “Charter” under the desired municipality. In both volumes charter enactments are referenced by the sub-subheading “Adoption.” Amendments to charters are referenced by the entry “Amendment” under the “Charter” subheading, and by appropriate subject entries. The user should note that official adoption of a charter is subject to approval under the referendum provisions of the enacting law. Therefore, it is possible some referenced charters may not have been adopted.

Other special and local laws may be subject to the approval of electors under referendum provisions. It is possible that these laws may not have been adopted. The user is urged to contact the Division of Elections of the Department of State or appropriate local officials to ascertain the results of any referendum called for by a special or local law.

Special districts and public boards, commissions, and agencies have been indexed in detail only when required by numerous references. In these cases, the laws creating the organization and powers of the governmental body are indexed under the entry “Creation.” Amendments to the creating legislation are indexed with appropriate subject entries.

In addition to this index, the user may also trace amendments to special and local laws by referring to the “Florida Laws” references in Shepard’s Florida Citations.

To assist users of the 1845—1970 volume of the index, two appendices are included in this volume. Appendix A lists corrections for errors which have been discovered in earlier editions of the 1845—1970 volume and adds missing entries or references. Users are encouraged to communicate any additional errors or omissions they may find to the Division of Law Revision and Information so they can be added to this list in subsequent publications. Appendix B is a table designed to locate special districts indexed in the 1845—1970 volume.

Prior editions of this volume may be discarded, however the 1845—1970 volume should be retained.

The index is compiled and published by the Division of Law Revision and Information of the Florida Legislature to inform and assist members and staff of the Legislature, state and local government officials, and the general public. The 1845—1970 volume and additional copies of this index may be purchased from the Division’s Law Book Services Office at www.fialegistore.com.

APPENDIX B
Districts Indexed
1845–1970 Index

Locating entries for districts indexed in the 1845–1970 volume of the Index to Special and Local Laws is sometimes difficult. Generally, a district encompassing territory in more than one county is indexed under its own name and a single-county district is indexed under the name of the county in which it is located. However, because of an inadequate number of cross-references, a knowledge of the proper county is often required to locate a single-county district. Also, entries are sometimes scattered, appearing under two or more different headings. To assist users of the 1845–1970 index, this appendix lists the districts appearing in the index together with the headings under which the district entries can be located. A single-county district which includes the county in its name is not listed unless it is indexed under a heading other than the county name.
